

GUIDE 02

Choosing the Right ISO Standard

Five of the most common standards Australian businesses pursue, and who each one is actually built for.

● ISO 9001 — Quality Management

Any business that needs to win tenders or prove consistent quality to customers. The most widely adopted ISO standard in Australia.

● ISO 27001 — Information Security

Tech companies, SaaS providers, and any business handling sensitive client or customer data.

● ISO 22000 — Food Safety

Food manufacturers, processors, and businesses across the food supply chain.

● ISO 45001 — Occupational Health & Safety

Construction, manufacturing, and other industries with physical workplace hazards.

● ISO 14001 — Environmental Management

Businesses with environmental commitments, or facing client and tender requirements around sustainability.

Pursuing more than one standard? An Integrated Management System (IMS) combines them into a single set of documentation and audits, cutting duplicated effort significantly.
